Flash Sentry, Cecil and Poindexter Welcome Sign

Premise by Natasha Levinger

Cecil, Flash and Poindexter are standing in front of a long piece of paper to be used for a banner, staring at it. Vice Principal Luna stands behind them and says, "I'm sure you will come up with the perfect sign to make the Crystal Prep kids feel welcome but also let them know we are stiff competition. I'll be back in a few to take a see what you come up with." She pats Poindexter on the back not that hard, but he still loses his balance from it. She walks away and they stand there.

Cecil says, "How are we supposed to let them know we are stiff competition AND welcome them? That's like, total opposites. Besides, while I believe in healthy competition, I also believe in peace."

Poindexter says, "I believe in Math."

Flash says, "I believe in music."

They all look at each other. Poindexter offers up that they each take on a different part of the sign and see what they come up with. They agree that's a good idea.

We see them scribbling away in fast motion each in their own world in their different areas of the huge banner. (Perhaps we even see day change into night and then back into morning again to see how long they are working on it.) They hop around doing all kinds of things to decorate the banner that we can't fully make out. Finally we go back to regular speed. We pull back and see what they have come up with.

Cecil has written WELCOME with the "peace" sign in every possible place to do a peace sign and has glued a beautifully detailed and artistic array of flowers, branches and sticks around it.

Poindexter has written CRYSTAL and has used symbols from the periodic table to spell it out (a la Breaking Bad) complete with the box around it and the molecular weight, each color coded.

Flash has written PREP out of pictures of various instruments on the background of a music sheet complete with notes, bass and treble clefs.

They look at it, proud of what they came up with. They hold it up and as Princess Luna is coming by to look at it, the football team BREAKS through it chanting, "WIN WIN WIN!!!"

They stare at it shocked. Princess Luna says, "That's a great idea, but it ruins the banner. Try it again."
