

Equestria Girls Shorts 9-13

9) We've Got the Look by Josh Haber -- Rarity demands the group dedicate a portion of their much needed rehearsal time to reviewing some of the many looks she has in mind for the band. Over the others' mild objections, "Shouldn't we be using this time to practice?" etc., she cycles through the outfits of every major band or trend of the past sixty years. Finally, she decides that, perhaps she should give this some more thought before they settle on their own "signature look".

10) Pinkie Pie's Party Prep by Natasha Levinger -- Pinkie Pie has the rest of the girls PSYCHED because she's landed them their first gig. She puts them through the paces to get them ready for it, telling them they have GOT to be at their best. She has them doing completely nonsensical things that don't seem to have anything to do with playing music. Pinkie emphasizes that since it is their first gig, they've really got to nail it or the band's rep will be ruined. When they get to their "super important" gig, they find out it is for the Cake babies, and it's actually a toddler birthday party. Pinkie insists that all the odd prep was worth it because with kids you've got to be ready for anything! Her bandmates shrug off the fact that their "super important gig" is for fans that can't even talk and start to jam.

11) I Dream of Ponies by Natasha Levinger -- Fluttershy falls asleep at the animal shelter where she volunteers and has a dream that all of her friends/bandmates are ponies. It's a nightmare, because none of them can use their instruments. You know, because they don't have hands. They all get increasingly upset as they each realize they can't play. When Pinkie Pie says they can't have a drummer because she can't hold the sticks, Fluttershy wakes up screaming. She is back at the animal shelter and says to the animals, "I had a nightmare my bandmates were all ponies!" One of the cats looks at her and says, "That was no nightmare." She looks down and sees her tambourine has been smashed by her own hoof. She screams and wakes up for real this time, then clutches her tambourine close.

12) The Case of the Missing Drumsticks by Natasha Levinger -- Pinkie Pie is upset because she can't find her drumsticks right before a show. She looks in increasingly bizarre places but can't find them. It turns out they were in her hair the whole time.

13) Behind the Music by Natasha Levinger -- The Cutie Mark Crusaders, completely obsessed with Sonic Rainboom, decide to make a "documentary" about them -- their very own Behind The Music. But since they can't honestly portray a true rise and fall of the band, since there has been neither, they take it upon themselves to do some "dramatic reenactments". From big arena shows (obviously staged in their bedroom) to fights in hotel rooms over toothpaste, the documentary exposes the nitty-gritty of the band. The band members watch it, and laugh, assuming it was supposed to be funny. The CMCs play along and when out of earshot look at each other and declare maybe docs are not their strong suit.
