FLUTTERSHY'S HOME FOR REFORMED DRACONEQUI

Princess Celestia has decided to show mercy on Discord and has released him from the stone statue that has been his prison since Twilight and her friends defeated him with the Elements of Harmony. Knowing that Fluttershy has a way with magical creatures, she asks that the gentle pony take him in and help him adjust to life “on the outside”.

Fluttershy agrees to do so but soon finds that though Princess Celestia has found a way to strip Discord of his magic, his disruptive personality remains the same. He's an absolutely horrible roommate and can't seem to help but make trouble for Fluttershy at every turn. Seeing what a bother he is (not only to Fluttershy, but to their own lives as well) Fluttershy's friends encourage her to kick Discord out of her cottage. They're sure Princess Celestia will understand that Fluttershy tried her best but there are just some draconequi that can't be reformed.

But despite the turmoil he's creating in her life, Fluttershy isn't willing to give up on Discord so easily. Ultimately she realizes that the fact that Discord is drawn to things that aren't in harmony with one another can actually be put to good use. Discord proves his worth when he's the only one able to figure out that a dispute between two beavers has rerouted water away from Sweet Apple Acres and is the reason the latest apple crop isn't as bountiful as usual.

Princess Celestia commends Fluttershy for helping Discord find a way to channel his unique abilities for good. She's very impressed and sees Fluttershy someday having an important role to play in pony/Magical Creature relations. Confident that Discord can now live a productive life, Princess Celestia tells him that he can seek out a place of his own. Fluttershy is happy to help but sure could use some assistance getting her cottage back in order. Discord has left it a complete disaster area.
