JUST FOR SIDEKICKS

Twilight, Rarity, Rainbow Dash, Applejack, Pinkie Pie and Fluttershy all have things to do in Canterlot and need someone to keep an eye on their critters while they are away. Unbeknownst to one another, they all end up asking Spike to watch their pets while they are gone. With promises of jewels and other rewards if he agrees to be responsible for the little animals, Spike agrees to not just one, not just two -- but all of the pet-sitting jobs. But when Angel runs off into the Everfree Forest and gets lost, Spike must go after her -- with all of the other critters in tow. Spike must locate Angel before the Ponyville Ponies return, but tackling the challenges of the Everfree Forest is nothing compared to trying to deal with the conflicting personalities of the critters accompanying him on his rescue mission. Meanwhile, Twilight and her friends discover that they've all left Spike in charge and try to find ways to get out of their respective obligations in Canterlot so that they can get back to their beloved sidekicks before the worst happens. Ultimately, it is Spike who finds himself in jeopardy and Gummy, Angel, Winona, Owlwicious, Tank, and Opal put aside their differences and save him. Our lead ponies return and are pleasantly surprised to find that everyone is fine. But when they offer Spike his promised jewels and rewards, Spike promptly turns them down. If anyone deserves to be rewarded, it is the pets that, in the end, were responsible for taking care of him.
