SPA DAY

Princess Cadence has invited Twilight and her friends for a girl's Spa Day in the Crystal Empire. (They'll be leaving their sidekicks with Spike while they are gone. Certainly he'll be able to handle that with no problem.) The Ponyville Ponies arrive in the Crystal Empire to find a somewhat frazzled Princess Cadence who is looking forward to a day of rest and relaxation. Taking on all the new responsibilities that come with ruling over an entire kingdom has left her in dire need of a worry-free day at the spa. No sooner has Princess Cadence settled in for a nice cucumber facial than a member of her staff arrives with a "tiny problem" that needs the Princess' immediate attention. Seeing how much her sister-in-law needs a break and eager to help her get her day of relaxation, Twilight decides not to inform Princess Cadence of her staff member's arrival and takes it upon herself to deal with this "small issue". She asks that the other ponies keep Cadence in the dark about her departure and the reason for it, but is certain she'll be able to return before Cadence even notices she is gone. They too can see how much Cadence needs her "spa time" and agree that this is the best course of action.

Alas, Twilight's efforts to deal with this "tiny problem" turn it into a slightly bigger one. Twilight soon finds herself sneaking her friends away from the spa to help her deal with the crisis that is now developing outside. (All while trying to keep Cadence in the dark back at the spa.) In the end, the problem becomes so big that Twilight and the Ponyville Ponies have no choice but to call on Princess Cadence to use her power as the leader of the Crystal Empire to solve it. Luckily, Princess Cadence is so relaxed that she's able to handle the crisis without getting the least bit vexed about it. Twilight and her friends have exhausted themselves trying to keep things under control and now that the problem has been solved, they are finally ready to enjoy their spa day. Alas, it is almost boarding time for the last train to Ponyville and they have to catch the Friendship Express. They're sure Spike has been able to keep track of their pets for the day, but they aren't about to leave him in charge of their sidekicks overnight.
