MAYOR, MAYBE NOT

When the Mayor of Ponyville is called away for a conference in Canterlot, Princess Celestia suggests that Twilight take over for her while she is gone. Twilight relishes the job and is pleased to be overseeing the day-to-day functions of the town. But as her tenure as Mayor continues, her friends start asking her to use her new position of power to get them things that they want. Twilight doesn't see the harm in giving her pals a helping hoof. That is until she realizes that granting her friends' requests is creating problems for the rest of her constituents. Soon all of Ponyville is in an uproar over the fact that Rainbow Dash, Applejack, Rarity and Fluttershy are getting special treatment. Twilight must find a way to make things right, but fears that reneging on her promises to her friends will create a rift in their friendship. In the end, it is Rainbow Dash, Rarity, Applejack, and Fluttershy who actually help Twilight get Ponyville back on track as they all come to realize that sometimes decisions must be based on fairness and not friendship.
