

MLP 423Untitled Premise by Corey Powell

Rarity is going through a serious creative dry spell and can't come up with a single new design. As every day passes without a single new idea, she becomes increasingly frustrated... and this is something that Spike just can't bear to witness. Hoping to impress her, he sneaks into the library of the Castle of the Two Sisters and finds a rare spell book that outlines how to enhance your creative powers. He brings the spell book to Rarity who tells him that she doesn't need more magic, just inspiration! However, inspiration still eludes her and she begins to feel the lure of the magic. Eventually, she succumbs and uses the spell. And, the spell is fabulous! She is coming up with brilliant idea after brilliant idea while Spike attempts to write them all down for future use. What they don't realize at first is that Rarity's 'brilliant new thoughts' are manifested as soon as she says them. Things begin to change around Ponyville in a hurry. The town and the other ponies are being magically remade whether they like it or not. Only Rarity and Spike know the reason behind these sudden changes, and Spike is ready to confess all. Alas, Rarity isn't. The power, the ideas, and the excitement of being a creative genius is just too much fun, and she isn't ready to give it up. However, as her ideas continue to flow, they get a little crazier and her ego gets a little bigger. Ponyville is being recreated in Rarity's image, and it has to stop! Eventually, the other ponies realize what has happened and help her 'let go of the magic' and go back to her old Rarity ways.