RARITY INVESTIGATES!

Premise Revised by Meghan McCarthy

As a member of the Wonderbolts Reserves, Rainbow Dash is called up to participate in an important Wonderbolts event. The Wonderbolts will be honoring retired Wonderbolt, Wind Shear, whose speed record has yet to be broken. (Though Rainbow Dash has come really, really close.) Rarity will be in Canterlot delivering items to her new boutique and is thrilled she'll be able to attend the celebration and support her friend, even if, as a Reserve, Rainbow Dash is mostly going to be relegated to the sidelines. But when the day of the ceremony arrives, Spitfire is nowhere to be found. That means Rainbow Dash is going to be called up to take her place in the celebratory flyover! Rarity couldn't be more excited for her friend.

But when Rarity arrives at the event, she learns that not only is Rainbow Dash not flying with the Wonderbolts, but that she has been accused of doing something nefarious to keep Spitfire away so that she could take her place! Rainbow Dash proclaims she's done nothing wrong, but all evidence seems to point to her guilt. With Princess Twilight tied up with Princess of Friendship duties, it falls on Rarity to step up and prove Rainbow Dash is innocent. And she's going to use every trick in her sewing kit to do it! Rainbow Dash is certain she's doomed, but Rarity, using her unique skill-set, gathers clues, interviews witnesses, and ultimately cracks the case. (Turns out that Wind Shear had heard that Rainbow Dash was close to breaking his Wonderbolts speed record and was desperate to get Dash booted from the Reserves so she could never break his record.) Rainbow Dash is thankful that her friend Rarity never doubted her, even when Rainbow Dash expressed doubts that Rarity had what it took to help her clear her name.
