THE PRINCESS OF STRESS

Premise by Amy Keating Rogers

Becoming the Princess of Friendship brought about a lot of new responsibilities and added pressure for TWILIGHT. Suddenly anypony with a friendship problem is coming to her for advice. Twilight is happy to guide them through their troubles and help mend each and every friendship she can. But who knew there were so many friendship problems in Ponyville? Twilight's workload has gotten so big she's almost rushing through these ponies' problems, barely listening, almost on autopilot. (And as a result, Twilight's friendship advice is less than stellar.) Suddenly the weather in Ponyville starts going haywire. Almost at the same time the Map calls FLUTTERSHY and Twilight to fly up to Cloudsdale. Twilight's so busy she's freaking out, but she has no choice but to go.

Arriving at the Cloudsdale Weather Factory, Twilight is determined to help the workers fix their problem as quickly as possible so that she can get home and continue her work. STORMY FEATHER, the Pegasus in charge, agrees with Twilight that if they go by the book, they should be able to fix everything in no time flat. Fluttershy, on the other hoof, meets up with a RAINBOW SHINE, who's second in command. Rainbow Shine is Stormy Feather's friend, but she's noticed that Stormy Feather just isn't listening to the workers since she got her promotion. Like Fluttershy, Rainbow Shine thinks they ought to take their time and really get to the heart of the matter before rushing to a solution.

But when Twilight and Stormy Feather deal with the issues in an overly logical manner, the weather goes completely wild, causing a huge storm to break out in Cloudsdale! When Fluttershy and Rainbow Shine bring up all of the flaws in the plan that caused this storm, Twilight and Stormy Feather realize their errors. Putting logic aside Stormy Feather finally listens to her friend and leads the Weather Factory workers from her instincts. Soon enough, the workers start really working together and are able to calm the storm in Cloudsdale and control the weather in all of Equestria again.

Stormy Feather apologizes for not listening to Rainbow Shine. And Twilight in turn apologizes to Fluttershy for getting so wrapped up in getting things done that she didn't do her job as the Princess of Friendship.

With the problem solved, Twilight and Fluttershy's Cutie Marks glisten and it is time for them to return to Ponyville.
