UNDER THE WEATHER

Premise by G.M. Berrow

Rainbow Dash has been selected by her fellow Wonderbolts to perform at a big event as Lead Pony in her favorite formation of all time. She is over-the-moon excited. Rainbow hits some unexpected turbulence, however, when she contracts a teeny-tiny cold a few days before the big show. The rest of the mane six recognize the symptoms immediately and try to get RD to rest and get better, but the only problem is—Rainbow won't admit that she's sick! Rainbow Dash doesn't stop and keeps running herself ragged with practice and social obligations in hopes of proving to everypony that she's just fine, thankyouverymuch. Her condition only worsens. On the day of the show, Rainbow is sneezing so much she can barely get out of bed, but she is determined to perform and puts on a brave front for the show. Once the massive crowd is watching and the routine begins, another sneeze attack hits Dash and she throws off the entire formation! The Wonderbolts save the show, but Dash is humiliated. Back on the ground, she is forced to admit to the Wonderbolts- and herself-- that she has been feeling under the weather. They are understanding and assure her that next time, it's okay to be honest. Rainbow Dash learns that while it's important to honor your commitments and desires, sometimes you have to be loyal to yourself first by taking care when you're not at your best.
