THE GIFT OF THE MAGMA

Premise by Josh Haber

Pinkie Pie has planned a super-amazing surprise for her sister, Maud. There is a one-of-a-kind volcanic rock on display at the Museum of Natural History in Manehattan. It's only there for one night, so she invites her sister on a trip to the city, where she will secretly obtain tickets. This works out great for Maud who has a surprise of her own for Pinkie. She plans to take Pinkie to the opening of the new shop of Manhattan's most famous cupcake baker, Citrus Jimmie. All Maud has to do is pick up her RSVP.

There are a million and one things in the city for each of them to distract the other with (parades for Pinkie, sidewalks for Maud) as they go through the steps necessary to pull off their respective surprises, but they keep getting in each other's way. Eventually they discover each other's surprise and realize it is scheduled for the same time as their own.

Eager not to "spill the beans" or have their sister disappointed by the conflicting plan, they both distract the other again with the myriad of city sights (Slam Poetry contests, Bridelway shows, etc.) as they undo their plans in favor of their sister's. Finally, when they are both successfully plan-less, everything comes out. They are left with nothing, except the knowledge that they are willing to sacrifice anything for the other's happiness.
