DISCORDANT HARMONY

Premise by Mike Fox and Wil Fox

Friendship lesson: Your friends are your friends for a reason.

Discord and Fluttershy are together at Fluttershy's enjoying their regular bi-monthly tea party. Realizing Fluttershy always hosts, Discord insists on hosting the next one at his place. Fluttershy is a bit wary, but agrees.

Discord's got it all planned out - he's going to make petits fours (that's one tastier than a petits four!), rivers of tea, boats constructed of doilies, and pull out all the stops in order to make this the greatest bi-monthly tea party in the history of ever!

Wanting to make sure he's dotted all his T's and crossed all of his I's, he goes to the ultimate party planner -- Pinkie Pie -- for advice. No pony knows parties better than her. Pinkie Pie tells him he's got this. All he has to do is make sure his guests are comfortable! Relieved, Discord goes home.

Once there, however, Discord realizes that his chaotic realm is, well, chaos. The house is teeming with potential "party fouls". For example, drinking from a living, breathing tea kettle might be off-putting for some ponies... who are sensitive like Fluttershy. Discord gets in his own head. After comparing what he's set up to what their usual tea parties are like, he comes to the conclusion -- this will be the worst bi-monthly tea party in the history of ever! In fact, he's sure Fluttershy will hate it so much, it'll end their friendship.

Desperate not to lose Fluttershy, Discord "normalizes" his realm, catching the floating clocks, making gravity consistent and turning all the impossible things there possible - until finally his house is turned into a picture-perfect space that would make Martha Stewart proud. Discord even wears a suit and tie and adopts a low-key personality (a la Bing Crosby.)

When Fluttershy comes over, everything seems to be going great... but because Discord thrives on chaos, normalizing his realm starts to affect him too. He begins to literally fade away (a la Marty in Back to the Future).

In order to save Discord, Fluttershy has to create chaos - in her hilarious Fluttershy way. When that doesn't work, Fluttershy helps Discord to return to his chaotic ways (possibly through a reverse "My Fair Lady" type song.)

Since he and his realm are back to their chaotic selves, Discord worries that Fluttershy will never want to have tea parties in such an uncomfortable place... and if she wants to end their friendship, he completely understands. Fluttershy explains that just because his chaotic realm may not be comfortable for her, it doesn't mean she wants Discord to change who he is! Fluttershy says they are friends for a reason, after all. The two happily enjoy tea together in Discord's crazy-upside-down chaos filled realm.
