

TEASER

- Open on SS writing to TS about his travels. We updates who he is, and his relationship with TS. Establish that he's wandering Equestria learning about friendship.
- Reveal TS is reading the card to RY. RY wonders why SS doesn't just come to TS's school to learn about friendship, TS admits she wishes he would.
- The post arrives (either via a Postal Pony or Cozy Glow) delivering the sewing machines for RY's class and flyers for a new friendship school.
- TS is shocked.

ACT ONE

- Outside students are abuzz. "There's another school!" "It's a University!" "They teach the same lessons, but in half the time!" etc. TS and RY realize they have to go and check it out.
- They arrive and meet some of the students who do seem very friendly. They all get along, display honesty, kindness, generosity, etc. The place actually seems legit.
- In a big orientation (i.e., song) we reveal the place is run by F&F! It's a motivational speech/sales pitch and the audience is really jazzed. They can't wait to enroll. TS and RY are immediately convinced it's a scam and say so.
- Neighsay is there evaluating the school for the EEA and is happy to point out that TS runs a rival school, so her opinion is biased/can't be trusted. F&F seize on this. Claiming TS is just there to rain on their parade because she's jealous. "This parade-rainer obviously can't handle a little competition."
- TS isn't fazed. Even if NS gives F&F accreditation, it won't convince her that they are legit. It would take more than the authority of the EEA to convince her. It would take the participation of somepony who was wise, somepony she respected, somepony like...
- F&F reveal SS is there! TS, "What are you doing here?" SS, "Learning about the magic of friendship from this wonderful school!" TS is dumbstruck!

ACT TWO

- SS's presence is enough to convince NS that the place is legit and gives accreditation on the spot.
- TS can't believe SS is there. If he wanted to go to a friendship school, why wouldn't he come to hers? SS, "Does it matter where I learn the lessons?" TS has to admit that it doesn't. BUT F&F are conponies and must be up to something. SS can't see what. F&F, "Obviously, this parade-rainer is bad-mouthing us because we're a competing school. She should leave."
- TS and RY resolve to discovering what the scam is. But they can't as themselves because everypony will just think they are trying to discredit the competition. They decide to go undercover! RY will enroll in classes, TS will sneak around and try to find figure out the scam and find proof.
- Everything TS finds points to the school being legit.
- The class that RY is in seems to be teaching actual friendship and, not surprising, RY is excelling. She's actually kind of jazzed about it.

- Frustrated but determined, TS tries something big (like sneaking into F&F's office), but gets caught and is unmasked!

ACT THREE

- In catching her, F&F take a picture and threaten to go to the papers with the story of how the Princess of Friendship was so threatened by a rival school that she disguised herself as a student to try to smear it. F&F, "Seems like the only pony breaking the rules here...Is YOU!"

- SS is particularly disappointed in her. He understands that she's suspicious, but she should give these guys a chance – otherwise it just looks like she's jealous. And if she loses her reputation, nopony will want to go to her school. (Basically if TS persists she could lose her school and her friendship with SS).

- TS goes to RY and admits things look dire. She doesn't want to give up, but she doesn't want to lose her rep either. RY doesn't know what to do and confesses that perhaps TS should give up and go home. RY is enjoying her classes, though, and plans to stay for the next session. She asks TS to sell the sewing machines she ordered so she can pay for the class materials. TS is surprised. She didn't realize F&F were charging. RY is unfazed. Since the classes are legit, charging for the materials seems fine – especially since F&F swear all the proceeds go to making the school even better.

- Something seems fishy to TS and knowing that she's risking her reputation, she decides to investigate one last time. She follows F&F and discovers that not only are they just making up the course materials, but they are using the money to expand their Las Pegasus resort instead of putting it back into the school as they promised.

- TS confronts them. They admit to it all, but refuse to budge because nopony would believe her and they have their incriminating evidence that she's just jealous. Unfortunately (for F&F) SS overhears it all. He magics Neighsay back and tells him the story. NS (regrettably) revokes their EEA approval and makes them return all the bits.

- Wrap up scene in which SS apologizes for not trusting TS. Both he and RY express admiration that TS didn't give up on what she knew was right even though it meant risking everything.
