

MILO MURPHY'S LAW

Miss Muroski

SERIES SYNOPSIS:

Milo Murphy is the personification of Murphy's Law:

Anything that can go wrong, will go wrong.

But he's prepared for every possibility, armed with knowledge, a backpack of supplies, and an endless sense of optimism and enthusiasm that can turn any catastrophe into an adventure!

Together with his fearless friend, Melissa, and Zack, the cool new kid in town, they will learn: "Don't sweat the BIG stuff."

And it's all big stuff.

A science teacher at the middle school, Miss Muroski has no personality whatsoever. She thinks she is funny and tends to laugh at herself. She is all science and doesn't believe in anything that can't be proven. She certainly doesn't believe in "Murphy's Law." She is a do-it-yourselfer who made her own desk (among other things) and uses her desk as a metaphor for life. She tries to inspire, but rarely does. Most kids think she's a little nuts.

2. MISS MUROSKI

RATTLING OFF INSTRUCTONS: Ok, class, take your projects up to the roof while I monitor the drop zone. And send one of your team members down with me for clean-up. I mean, you know, to retrieve your creations.

3. MISS MUROSKI

AWKWARD: I mean, you know, to retrieve your creations.

4. MISS MUROSKI

ENCOURAGING: You need to take into account acceleration speed! I can't emphasize weight distribution enough.

5. MISS MUROSKI

ADMONISHING: And we have our first successful- Oh, nope, no. Get the mop over here.

6. MISS MUROSKI

THRILLED: We have a winner!

7. MISS MUROSKI

IMPRESSED: This is really, well, amazing. How did you do it?

You know I made those pencils you're holding.

Ew

But why would you do that? Pencils are like... a penny.

There is a unique satisfaction in a job well done that can fill an otherwise very empty life. Or so I've heard.

Okay, everyone close your textbooks. Go on. Close them up. Now get under your desks. Come on.

It's a different perspective down there, isn't it?

you've got to grab that gum by the horns and chew it.

Chew it!

Literally?

Uhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh... I guess not, no.
